IMOR scope and practical service this Workstands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been com pelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in reience generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exerrises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt t make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast conjumy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. The scope of the work is so great, and its utilitarian purposes so connecte, that a re-Berence to its pages enables a person who anderstands English to cinamunicate effectively | I HE maningment of the Hongrone Hotel with natives who understand nothing but Chi. Less has this day been placed in the hands of nese. In this respect, the work will be found Mr. George E. Porres to whom all communicated indispensable to all Europeans, residing in fractions on the business of the Hotel should be China, and to the natives themselves it ex- addressed. plains subjects fully, with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasionally.

Extracts Love and Marriage. That love is the leading element of the highest happiness in marriage; that love, while it lasts, covers a multitude of errors, privations, misfortunes -even sins-I do not doubt. But the question is, how far is love, when unnecompanied, by any other of the conditions which have mentioned as belonging to a perfect murriago, itself a justification of marriage? True love works wonders; but it cannot prevent the phy 1 sical and mental ailments which develope them. I conveniently situated and commanding selves in people of feeble organisms. A sculptor would probably spoil a hundred blocks of marble, before making so much as a statuette a foot high were he to trust himself only in the matter. Even Michael Angelo, when he tried to dispense with the " statuery," or "practitioner." succeeded only in making fragments of figures. Not being an adept in judging of the size of the block beneeded, he was constantly finding that he had | Bowna & Co. miscalculated, and that an arm, a leg, a head ! must remain unfinished in consequence: The "statuary," who is often an artist of great merit, and possessed of as much talent in middle floors, with private residence on the his way as the sculptor in his, sets the master upper floor, and separate entrance thereto. model on a platform, measures it, and places it. A second workness now appears, with a chisel and a hammer to hew away the fragments of nurble between the different holes, and along the pencil lines drawn as guide marks. This work is more or less easy, according as the attitude is simple or funciful. If the figure b one of a modern personage, standing placedly with his arms by his sides, attired in the clothes of our day, and with nothing eccentric in the well situated: postore of his legs, the task offers no difficulties, a dimay be entrusted to a very ordinary workman; but if the subject be a group or a figure in an attitude—for instance, like that c Ainx defying the lightning—the chisel cannot be intrusted to any but a practised hand, and every blow of the hammer must be struck with the greatest caution. The appearance presented by the marble when the preparatory hewing has ended, is that of some persons; thickly, wrapped up in a shrond. The outlines of head and body can be vaguely detected under the white covering, but nothing more; and i is not until the statuary bimself has set to work with his finer chisel and more delicate hand. that a tangible form begins to emerge from the hard mass. First the bead, then the shoul. ders and frunk, then the legs, and then the erms and bands appear. The arms and hands. if outstretched, are reserved to the last; if detached first from the block, the oscillations caused by the chiesl in bewing the other parts of the murble might shake and crack them. This is a very necessary premaution, and it is even usual to keep the arms, the finzers, and other projecting parts of marble statues continually apported by prope of wood until the moment when the work is set upon its pedestal !
